[19] Id., ¶ 3. [20] However, in order to make this decision, the Court would need to know what effect, if any, the change in LPP and LPP II caused by the ability of Maine to attract new jobs would have on the businesses that had been the lifeblood of the former Down East Area. In any event, the Court can consider this potential effect, if any, only in connection with the interstate commerce prong of § 1983, discussed infra. [21] Prior to, and after, the enactment of the LPP and LPP II, the access of lumber to its final destination in Maine's New England market was provided by the Down East Area, a lumber entity serving a narrow market area, rather than by the entire Maine timber industry. There is nothing in the record indicating the extent to which the Down East Area did or did not compete with the other Down East Area lumber entities to supply the lumber that ended up in the market area of Maine's New England lumber industry. The lack of such data, the fact that the other Down East Area lumber entities all operated in Maine, and the large number of jobs created in Maine by the Down East Area create a need for further information regarding the effect of the new law on Maine's economy and jobs. [22] The plaintiffs also allege that the new law will increase the cost of labor by encouraging Maine lumber companies to hire migrant workers rather than hire Maine workers, and thus forcing Maine workers to work outside of Maine. There is no evidence, however, of the degree to which migrant workers are employed in Maine's lumber industry or how the new law will affect the level of labor costs in Maine. [23] The only evidence on the subject is that the agreement between the United States and the Soviet Union to abolish intermediate nuclear weapons in 1989, effective in 1990, was based on the United States' determination that the Soviets would not be 82157476af
